Anonymous communications not read; re-jected manuscripts not returned or preserved. How to Settle the Question. The extension of the Washington aqueduct to 14th and Boundary streets, by a tunnel, would forever settle the question of water supply. It would cost about $400,000, and would benefit every house and lot and citizen. An addition of $1.30 to each of 23,000 water rent bills rendered last year, would give the sum of $29,900 a year, enough to pay four per cent. interest on the cost and leave a clear $13,900 per annum to begin a sinking fund for redemption of the principal. This contribution to the sinking fund will increase as the number of water takers increases.

If there be any danger of cast iron pipes wearing out, it is manifest that the tunnel, which won't wear out, and will not need inspectors and water tappers and watchmen to take care of it, will be cheaper than additional iron mains. It will settle adversely forever the question of making people pay for meters, plumbing and trouble, all to work a whole year to measure incorrectly a poor man's yearly bill of $3 for water rent.

Too Modest in Our National Claims. There is one point of comparison between nations, which, as exhibited by the United States, Americans strangely enough understate and concerning which, instead of boasting, they show an unexpected modesty. The New York Tribune discovers from the calculations of Prof. Elliott, of the Census Bureau, that the population of the United States is almost invariably underestimated. Instead of forty-four or fortyfive million inhabitants, the United States has really a population of forty-eight and a half millions, and the probable population on the first of July, 1879, 1s 49,395,000. It is thought that these calculations are strongly confirmed by the census taken in fifteen of the states by state authority, during 1874 in Michigan, during 1875 in Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Wisconstn, and during 1876 in Missouri and Nebraska. With allowance for the unavoidable incompleteness of every census taken by defective state machinery, it must be granted that the actual increase for the whole country to 1875 must have been at least as great as the increase apparent in the returns from these states of the dates named. The population of the fifteen states in 1870 was 14,610,636, and, according to the census taken by the states about the middle of the decade, it was 16,963,020, the gain being 16.1 per cent. in about five years, or at the rate of 32.9 per cent, for the decade. Assuming this rate of increase for all the states, the figures given above for the entire population are obtained. Now that the Tribune has established that on, at least, one national subject Ameri cans are commendably modest, it is to be hoped that the calling of attention to the fact will not have the effect of setting all to boasting.

The story that Grant and his party were suspected of being Fenians and were closely watched during their stay in Ireland, is a fair offset to the chilling effect of the discourtesy of Cork. No true son of the Emerald Isle can withhold sympathy from a citizen of Dublin tracked by the emissaries of despotism.

Senator Hill, of Georgia, may incur the ill will of the claim agents, and perhaps the censure of some of his constituents by his frank and decided declaration of opposition to the payment of the southern war claims, but there can be no doubt that his speech of yesterday will be of immense service to the democratic party in going before the country in the next national contest. It will go very far to break the force of the republican appeal for a united North against a united South.

Moncure D. Conway's new book on the evolution and history of his Satanic majesty aims to convince that "the deil's dead." As the cipher dispatch investigation proceeds the republican managers and democratic coparceners may alternately and reciprocally congratulate each other on the removal of uneasiness upon this subject.

The expected resignation of the Rev. Dr. Hepworth from the Church of the Disciples in New York is agitating the congregation and connected church circles. In spite of the fact that he preaches against sensationalism in the pulpit, Dr. Hepworth is considered by some of his flock to have leanings in that direction. Not a few of his congregation are shocked at his lack of dignity on occasions. "It was said, while writing his sermons in the little study in the basement of his church, he frequently stopped work and turned somersaults, stood upon his head, performed upon trapeze bars, and did other things that would have been more appropriate in the sawdust and tan-bark arena. A lady called at his study one day and found him playing circus, and she raised her hands in horror and rebuked him then and there." The tastes of congregations differ. Dr. Hepworth denounces sensationalism in the pulpit and properly confines his athletic exercises to his study, yet he is pronounced "too sensational." While over in Brooklyn a minister whose gymmastics are not confined by any considerations of time or place, and who avoids the "old ruts" even in business transactions, is not so considered,-by his congregation at least.

There was trouble among the preachers of the New York conference of the Baptist church yesterday. It arose from some charges made by the somewhat notorious Rev. Mr. Fulton that Dr. Samson, formerly of this city, was disloyal to the cause of freedom during the late war. Mr. Fulton refused to withdraw his offensive words, and after a heated discussion he was suspended from membership in the conference.
